

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

LADY KITTY'S TEMPTATION.

BY ISOLA FORRESTER.

Copyright, 1904, by Isola Forrester.

She rode slowly. Lady Kitty somewhat hesitated, and because the trail is narrow and treacherous below Lost Moon, so that Allison should not see her, she pulled back they had ridden side by side. The trail had been wider than this. The reason for the proximity, but the reason for her cheeks, and the slightest tilt to her chin belied her power.

Allison, he was shamelessly self-centered and at ease. She had even seen him whistling as they turned into Mountain Gulch, and when she had passed him, he had not tried to look back.

Lady Kitty felt irritated by the impetuosity of his confident attitude. She was not a woman to be easily won. It is not pleasant to feel that one is being led. It is not pleasant to feel that one is being led. It is not pleasant to feel that one is being led.

She had no doubt but what she had met it. It had not seemed serious, merely a part of the trip. He had not appeared worth considering like the other men who, as the Major neatly put it, had been "blowing" her. She had felt that in a day or so she could not go back to him and leave him with the same comfortable regret as Red Mountain. It was not a pleasant prospect.

She tried to forget to remember the awful moment, but its details danced before her mind insistently. There had been a long silence after she had said to him they were going away from Lost Moon in the morning. The party was going through Arizona. The Major, who had been her friend and confidant, had said to her, "You are going to Arizona, aren't you?" She had said, "Yes." He had said, "You are going to Arizona, aren't you?" She had said, "Yes." He had said, "You are going to Arizona, aren't you?" She had said, "Yes."

She had no doubt but what she had met it. It had not seemed serious, merely a part of the trip. He had not appeared worth considering like the other men who, as the Major neatly put it, had been "blowing" her. She had felt that in a day or so she could not go back to him and leave him with the same comfortable regret as Red Mountain. It was not a pleasant prospect.

came toward them smiling. Lady Kitty thought she had never seen such honest, trusting eyes before, except in deer. She looked up at Allison.

"Hello, Bob. Them chickens are just terrible. No, dad's gone over to the ranch. There's a wash-out down in the gulch. He wants some of the boys to help him fix up the trail. Want to rest up a bit and wait?"

Allison said "no," he would ride on a little, and see if the path was safe down Booty's side of the mountain.

"This is Miss Booty, Lady Kitty," he added, as he rode away.

Dimple Booty watched until the pines hid him.

"I'm always afraid of washouts," she said confidentially. "What if you and Bob had ridden together over a year? You would, too, only it wasn't dark yet. But Bob knows the way. He comes up here so often."

"I suppose he does," Lady Kitty looked thoughtfully down at the slim figure in the red calico dress, at the pretty dimpled face that had not yet lost the roundness or daintiness of childhood. "He seems to be a very interesting young man."

"Yes, Bob's nice," Dimple spoke simply, with an air of peaceful ownership. "I guess we'll get married soon as Bob comes to the point."

"Has he?" Lady Kitty hesitated delicately. "Has he asked you?"

Dimple's eyes opened in surprise.

"Why, no, not point-blank, but we've been going together over a year. I'm seventeen. Dad says that's a kind of young, but I think such a sight of Bob he'll let us get married."

Allison came up the path among the pines.

"It's all right," he called. "We'll make the ranch before dark. Good-by, Dimple."

"Bye, Bob," he glanced followed him wistfully. "See you tonight?"

"Maybe," Allison did not turn around. When the cabin was out of sight, he spoke.

"You are going up to the canyon tomorrow, aren't you?"

"As far as the springs. Then we go over into Arizona."

"I'm going too," Allison's tone was quiet and decisive.

Lady Kitty smiled and reached for a leaf of the book that brushed her face.

"Are you, indeed? As guide?"

"A dull flush crept up under the sunburn. Lady Kitty followed up her advantage.

"I am glad the Major secured you. We are really such a lot of innocents astray in these parts, that you will be welcome."

"I am not acting as guide to straying innocents. I am going after you."

Lady Kitty's eyebrows lifted. She did not meet his gaze however. She knew her limitations.

"It is very kind of you, I'm sure, but I don't believe I would if I were you. We sail for home in November, and I am to be married next spring. Even if her voice was suddenly gay and clear—even if one does forget sometimes, in this wonderful land. After all, one's in country is best, you know."

He stared at her in dawning knowledge, and his face was pitifully boyish in its hardened pain.

"It was the first time," he said at last. "But I'm not. It was your fault, too. You ought to carry danger signals if you don't want wrecks along your track."

"Keep off the track," she laughed. "There are no wrecks up on Red Mountain."

His face softened. When they found the trail again, and started the ponies back toward Lost Moon at a faster gait, he said one word:

"Thanks."

"They rode on in silence. Lady Kitty ahead. She did not trust herself to speak not with the memory of the girl in red calico fresh in mind, and the eyes of Allison a few feet behind. He was riding with loose rein, chin up, his hat low over his eyes, and Lady Kitty smiled as she thought of Rodney. She almost hoped that she had returned the kiss.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Thomas Kearns yesterday issued invitations for an at home on Wednesday, the 23rd, from 3 to 5 o'clock, at her home, 60 East South Temple street. As this will be quite a large affair society looking forward to the day with much pleasure in anticipation.

The event of today will be the buffet luncheon in honor of Mrs. Truman by Mrs. Edward S. Ferry and Mrs. Montague Ferry, at the home of the first named.

Despite the storm warning the weather at the Country club was ideal yesterday and many were out for golf and table d'hôte luncheon. Several little luncheons were given for four and six and in the evening one or two dances were held. Mrs. Perry being host at one and Mr. and Mrs. Will Cunningham giving another.

Miss Alice Goodwin left for New York yesterday to be away some time.

Mrs. Jack Keith has returned to the city.

Mrs. Clement arrived in New York in time for the opening of the horse show.

The ladies of the Central Christian church will hold a sale of Thanksgiving goodies at 24 South Main on Saturday and Tuesday.

T. M. Schumacher has gone to Chicago and New York.

Miss Edith Hennefer and George E. Brown were quietly married last evening at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edw. G. Brown, at their home on East Third South street. Bishop Iversen performed the ceremony at half-past 7 o'clock, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the young people. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Ella Swan, and the groom by Arthur Swan. From 8 to 11 o'clock an informal reception was held, when about seventy-five friends of the young couple called to extend their friends' good wishes. The room were prettily decorated for the occasion, the parlor in green and white, the dining-room in green and pink, while autumn blinks were seen in the hall, where punch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will be at home to their friends after December 1 at 412 East Third South street.

Mrs. George W. Snow entertained informally yesterday afternoon at her home. Among the guests were Mrs. Cook of Nephi, Mrs. Hampton, Mrs. Haymon, Mrs. Thomas Marlowe, Mrs. Samuel Clark, Mrs. Harry Fennimore, Mrs. Claude W. Gates, Mrs. Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. George K. Flecher will informally entertain at dinner at the Country club Saturday evening.

Most of the first nighters will be at the Theater tonight.

Arrangements for Thanksgiving dinners show that there will be a larger number of elaborate home affairs this year than ever before.

J. E. Cosgriff has returned from the East.

C. S. Vadnor, wife, children and governess have returned from a month's
